

Goodevening, I come from St. Louis and was set to enjoy the movie Saving Private Ryan on my local ABC affiliate this veterans day only to find out that due to FCC regulations, and possible reprecussions, it would not be aired. They went on to state that the FCC would not give them information regarding whether or not it would be "appropriate" to air the movie uncut. Who are you to deem this movie appropriate or not? My grandfather fought in World War Two in the European Campaign. He was in the 101st Airborne and was in Bastogne during the Battle of the Buldge. I persnally take great pride in my late grandfathers' accomplishments and due to the fact that he is no longer around I watch that movie every Veterans Day to pay homage to his memory. I am HIGHLY insulted by your lack of understanding the difference between a movie that shows the horrors of war during one of the greatest campaigns the United States has ever been involved in (One in which every man who fought is considered a hero), and a woman baring her breast to gain public attention. Shame on you all for considering these two instances to be the same. Perhaps you all need to re-think your morale values and realize that you are not gods, that the morales you have are not, and apperantly after this fiasco, and should not be put on the American people. I hope that a public outcry is made over this and there is a complete overhaul in the FCC. And I am personally disgusted that people who call themselves Americans, and work for the American government would slap veterans and the families of veterans in the face like this. Pull your collective heads out of your collective asses,

Sincerley,
